Dark Mode. Version 2.4 introduces a new feature: dark mode. Setting dark mode changes the colour scheme, so the background colour is dark - nearly black - and the text is pale. This setting is useful for using the oremus Bible Browser in a dark setting, for example at a nighttime service in a church or elsewhere.

`subset()` is special because it implements different scoping rules: the expressions `a >= 4` or `b == c` are evaluated in the specified data frame rather than in the current or global environments. This is the essence of non-standard evaluation. How does `subset()` work? We've already seen how to capture an argument's expression rather than its result, so we just need to figure out how to ...
