Downshifting means working towards simple living by making conscious choices to leave materialism behind and move on to a more sustainable lifestyle. It does not mean simply cutting back and trying to live the same life only with less money. Downshifting requires prioritizing, an adjustment in values, and a totally different mindset... not just a change to a more frugal way of living.

I haven't bought potato chips for a long time. There must be a potato chip out there somewhere that is made without soy, without hydrogenated oils, and without oils from crops that have been genetically modified... but I haven't found any. Even the chips advertised as "fried in olive oil" have canola oil... or corn or soy... also listed in the ingredients.

Some people practice simple living by reducing consumption. By lowering expenditure on goods or services, the time spent earning money can be reduced. The time saved may be used to pursue other interests, or help others through volunteering. Some may use the extra free time to improve their quality of life, for example pursuing creative activities such as art and crafts.

Shape – it's important to use a smooth round ball so you can control its movement precisely when you roll on it. I've seen marketing pictures of people holding a massage ball in their hand and pressing it on their body which is pure fantasy. If you're not using your body weight to apply pressure on the massage ball, you're wasting your time.
