"Catapult Soul" is a remarkable work of heart and soul. The protagonist is Vincent "V" Vallano, a sarcastic but lovable outcast. The story begins with V giving a short historical account of Pittsburgh and the steel industry, humorously detailing how a poor Pittsburgher invented the steel-making process but because of bankruptcy was bought out by a wealthy Englishman.

And that attitude carries over into this work. It's filled with many references and devotions but it's distinctly and undeniably written by Brian Celio. He said it first and indirectly; I'm saying it second and directly: Catapult Soul can't be compared to another book and it's a book that could never be successfully mimicked. Now onto the story.
