I. Introduction. In the early years of the nineteenth century, Americans' endless commercial ambition—what one Baltimore paper in 1815 called an “almost universal ambition to get forward”—remade the nation. 1 Between the Revolution and the Civil War, an old subsistence world died and a new more-commercial nation was born. Americans integrated the technologies of the Industrial ...

The French are said to refuse change. At the same time, they always demand reforms and hope for (or fear) a major revolution. The reason for this illogical attitude toward change is that each change may hurt one of the French sacred cows and it can be summarized in a few often-heard statements : « If I have to change, it means that I lost....»: the French do not believe in the possibility of ...
